Bouygues Energies & Services awarded the ISO 27001 certification

Bouygues E&S FM UK Limited has been awarded the international standard ISO27001:2013 certification for their Information Security Management System (ISMS).

ISO 27001 is one of the most recognised and internationally accepted information security standards. It identifies requirements for a comprehensive ISMS, and defines how organisations should manage and handle information in a secure and consistent manner.

The external body awarded the certification following a recent audit of all controls involved in the delivery of facilities management services to our government clients.

The auditor was extremely pleased with the engagement he witnessed from senior management to front line staff, recognising that Bouygues Energies & Services are committed to provide a high degree of assurance. They observed that all staff and supply chain partners are provided with the correct level of information security awareness, education and skills.

Our CEO, David Carr said "I'm delighted that we have been awarded the ISO 27001 certification, a perfect illustration of team achievement. It demonstrates to our existing and future clients, our commitment to best practice and to achieve the very highest standards of information security."

This new award complements our Cyber Essentials certification.
